Mrs. Nancy Allison McKinley, mother of the President, died Sunday morning at 2:30 o'clock. Early in the day it was noticed that she was growing weaker and the attending physician assured the loving watchers that she could not possibiy live throughout the night. The President and the other members of the imme diate family held their silent vigil by the bedside until the end came. It was peaceful and without a struggle. Around the death-bed when the final scene was enacted, were President Mc-Kinley and his wife Mr. Abner McKin-ley, Mrs. Duncan, and Miss Helen Mcley, Mrs. Duncan, and Miss Helen Mc-Kinley, children of the aged woman. The aged sister was there, Mrs. Abigail Osborne, the only one of the Allison family now living. Mrs. Bowman, of Loraine; Misses Grace and Mabel Mc-Kinley, James McKinley, Miss Duncan, and Jack Duncan, grandchildren, were in the sad party that witnessed the last scene in the gentle life.

It is a coincidence that Mrs. McKinley died at almost the identical hour of the day as did her husband, on Thanksday as did her husband, on lands-giving, five years ago. President McKin-ley remained up until about 3:30 o'clock, a little more than an hour after the death, and then retired for a few hours' ueath, and then retired for a few hours' morrow, left Washington at 7:29 o'clock to-night over the Pennsylvania railroad. Sunday, the President tenderly and tearfully laid clusters of flowers on the graves, while the site of the mother's resting place was being selected.

Stewart L. Bowman, of Loraine, Mr. Stewart L. Bowlman, of the husband of one of Mrs. McKinley's grandchildren, joined the family circle Sunday morning. The children and grandchildren, except Mrs. George B. Morris, of San Francisco, a daughter of the late David McKinley, and all of the immediate family were present for the closing scenes of life.

She denied the charge that she had broken into the Coles's woman's house, but said she merely knocked on the door. She also said she had made up her mind to sell some articles in her trunk in order to get enough money to take her back to Hartford.

The trunk to which she referred was found yesterday in the room at No. 1835 which she had occupied, and taken to the First Police Station, where it was opened by Captain Thomas, hoping to find something which would lead to a location of her friends and its proper owner. The trunk, an apparently new one, of medium size, contained articles of clothing, a large number of letters, in French and in English. One in the former tongue showed that her maiden name was Rivet, and her father was Narcisse Rivet. She had married Carpenter, and there is one telegram among the last addressed to Marie Russell. There is also a postal addressed to Marie Car-penter, No. 163 Water street, Springfield, Mass. A few books and papers and a large photograph album, with the clothes, complete the list of contents. ORDER FOR COUNCIL.

COLONEL STUBBS WILL ISSUE IT SOME TIME DURING TO-DAY,

WAITED FOR EVIDENCE TO BE FILED.

Contention as to His Right to Convene the Advisory Body-Explanation of the Statement Concerning

Captain Micajah Woods and Judge Berryman Green, of the Grand Camp Investigating Committee, who remained over to certify the transcripts of the evidence adduced before them, have completed this work and turned the testimony in its entirety over to Adjutant-General Thomas Ellett. Judge Green left for his home in Danville last night and Captain Woods will go to-day to Charlottes ville.

The evidence has not been turned over to Grand Commander Stubbs, and he has no official information that it has been certified to, hence he has not yet issued his order calling the Grand Camp Advisory Council to convene. He will, however, issue this order to-day, and while he has not determined upon the time and place for assembling the council, it is likely that he will name an early a datu in next week as the time, and Richmond as the place of meeting.

NOT ADDRESSED TO STUBBS. In a published interview had with him yesterday, Mr. O. B. Morgan, a member of the Investigating Committee, is quoted as saying that the report of the committee was addressed to the Gran1 Camp, and not to Colonel Stubbs, and hence no action can be taken by an advisory council, or by the Grand Commander. On this point, however, Colonel Stubbs takes issue with Mr. Morgan. Said he to a Dispatch man yesterday, after having read the remarks attributed to

Mr. Morgan:

"The report of the Investigating Committee is addressed to 'the Grand Camp.' Orders and Regulations of Grand Camp.' Article W1., section 5 provides: There shall be an advisory council, composed of the Grand Commander and the commanders of the examps, which shall meet, subject to the call of the Department Commander, whenever, in his judgment, business of sundent importance may justify its convening. They shall act for the Grand Camp, in the interval between annual sessions."

"The Grand Commander deems this report 'af sufficient importance' to convenie the Advisory Council in the near future, and the time and place will be fixed on to-morrow.

to-morrow. NOT LEE PERSONALLY.

Colonel Stubbs's attention was called to the following telegram to the New York Herald from Habana:

Herald from Habana:

"Consul-General Fitzhugh Lee said to me to-day that he knows nothing of non never had anything to do with the investigation by the Confederate Vettenas of the action of the History Committee. He said he has never written a line on the subject to any one. He condemns Colonel Stubbs for indiscretion if the latter has been rash enough to connect his vota as a member of the Legislature for United States Senator with the matter."

Colonel Stubbs said that he had never Colonel Stubbs said that he had never intended by the remark, "Fitz Lee has a finger in this matter," to refer to General Lee in person, He meant by it that his (Stubbs) "persecution" was being aided by "over-zealous friends" of the Consul-

Until the Advisory Council moets in terest in the investigation will continue to centre in the Womack checks, which necessary, go into the criminal courts. He has not yet been able to get a clue on which to work, but says he hopes to do so in the next day or so. When asked if he had communicated with the book company which he represents concerning the matter, he replied that he had not, and that he would not until after he had oncluded his inquiry.

Mr. Womack takes exception to the allusion made to him by Colonel Stubbe in his card, and is preparing a voluminous answer thereto, in which he says he will give all the facts in the case and expose
